Chocolate makers adjust recipes for success

March 29, 2013 | By Tiffany Hsu, Los Angeles Times

See's Candies, Hershey and other firms take steps in the face of tighter cocoa supplies and higher sugar and manufacturing costs.

In 92 years, See's Candies has never shied away from being old-fashioned. At the factory on La Cienega Boulevard, some octogenarian workers measure their decades of employment in hip replacements. Quaint floral details are still hand-piped onto chocolate eggs...[FULL STORY]

Sweet Spot 4 Sweeties

February 09, 2013 | Chris Erskine

I'm in my traditional Cupidian buying frenzy leading up to Valentine's Day, my major organs bursting with good intentions, not knowing quite where to turn, getting a little angry about it actually -- the frustrations of unbridled romance, bordering on malice, verging on... [FULL STORY]

CANDY mega-store opens!

November 14, 2012 | By Betty Hallock

The 30,000-square-foot CANDY store opened at the Hollywood & Highland Complex. Warning: Just reading this might give you cavities. More candy than you've ever imagined in one place is now housed in one sweet place. Sweet!
